What Comes Next?

As we approach the conclusion of our exciting journey together, we are thrilled to share some key highlights from the final phase of our project, which has brought together a diverse group of VET trainers, freelancers, and professionals.

These individuals have been shaping the future of freelance work and professional development, creating pathways for aspiring and experienced freelancers alike.

National Piloting of our Resources

One of the most significant steps in this phase of the project was the National Piloting Sessions. Conducted in a hybrid manner or fully online, these sessions marked a pivotal moment in testing the digital incubator model we have been building. Each participating organization was given the flexibility to run their pilot activities in a format that suited their unique needs, using platforms like Zoom and other virtual meeting tools.

These pilotings targeted a range of participants, from experienced freelancers to professionals offering services to other freelancers. Additionally, individuals who had already been involved in previous phases (such as the Needs Analysis and Learning, Teaching, and Training Activities - LTTA) were joined by newcomers, creating a rich and diverse testing ground. The results from these pilotings will play a crucial role in shaping the final version of our digital incubator, a tool designed to foster entrepreneurial growth and skills for freelance professionals across Europe.

Final Transnational Partner Meeting

On October 1, 2024, we had the privilege of hosting the Final Partner Meeting in Madrid, Spain. This meeting served as a culmination of all the efforts and collaborations made over the course of the project. Partners from across Europe gathered to reflect on our shared achievements, evaluate the piloting results, and discuss the sustainability of our outputs beyond the official project timeline.

The discussions were rich, focusing on ways to continue supporting VET trainers and freelancers through future initiatives, building on the tools, resources, and experiences we've gained. The team also celebrated the success of our online piloting, which showcased how flexible, digital solutions can be utilized to overcome time and logistical barriers, allowing freelancers from different countries to participate and benefit.

Project Completion: What Comes Next?

As the project reaches its formal conclusion, we are filled with immense pride for everything that has been achieved. We have collectively built a platform that empowers freelancers and freelance service providers. The digital incubator is poised to become an indispensable tool for professionals in Europe, and we look forward to its long-term impact.

But while this project is wrapping up, the work is far from over. Each partner organization is committed to ensuring that the resources, tools, and learnings will continue to support the freelance community in the coming years.

We will also explore possibilities for future collaboration as the freelance landscape continues to evolve.

Stay tuned for more updates and future opportunities, and thank you once again for being part of this incredible journey!
